Change one thing, change the future....

Futurebuild 2020 brought together the most innovative and forward-thinking brands from across the world who all share a common purpose, delivering a more sustainable built environment. The built environment community are all passionate about, and committed to, coming together to help solve the climate emergency.

We saw an impressive increase in the number of senior level decision makers registering to attend, with figures up by over a third. This includes company chairs, CEOs, MDs, Directors, Owners and Proprietors. We were delighted with the quality of the audience choosing to register for the event with the number of architects up by 60% and sustainability managers by a huge 76%.

> Exhibitor satisfaction was at its highest in years and this was reflected with a Futurebuild record of exhibitors rebooking their 2021 stand space onsite.

Futurebuild is a show which we consider as the Oscars of the built environment. Everyone comes to this show including people from other countries. It's a show we should all be at and that is why we are here.

A word from our Futurebuild 2020 exhibitors

It's a very well-attended event, and gives an opportunity and platform to showcase our product range and talk to it on mass and tell people the benefits of Hadley.

Matt Conway, Area Sales Manager, Hadley Group

You've got good representation from construction clients, contractors, sub contractors and for us from the manufacturing side. It's rare for us to really be able to get a chance to talk to people from throughout the entire tier levels of the supply chain, so really valuable for us.

Alex Small, BIM & Digital Platforms Manager, TATA Steel

The reason we came to the show is to actively interact with the architects. They've been very pleased and so we are also very happy to be at the show. This has been a fantastic show for us.

I think people can feel there is a ground swell of change happening and this is where you can start seeing the impacts of it and start to get a sense of that and see what the future is like.

Jamie Johnston, Director, Head of Global Systems, Bryden Wood

Futurebuild is a great opportunity for the whole industry and clients to come together and see what is latest and new in innovation within the construction sector. A key part of carbon emission deduction is that we get buildings right. We need to get buildings down to net zero emissions and that goes for our existing building stock as well as the new build stock.

Ian Hutchcroft, Innovator, Energiesprong UK

This was our first-time participating at Futurebuild. I'd like to thank the organizer team who were real kind, companionable and professional. We had a great show, established and powerful network among decision-makers in our sector "off-site". We gained solid contracts and agreements supplying an efficient growth to our business in the British & European market. An obvious cost-benefit gain!

Boost your reach, exposure and ROI with Easyfairs' EasyGo packages

Benefits of smart badge technology for exhibitors

Easyfairs provides all exhibitors with comprehensive marketing package of tools and support, not least a smartbadge reader on each stand. This reader acts as a virtual shopping bag for visitors, allowing them to collect information about exhibitors digitally; it also gives exhibitors access to details of visitors who are interested in their company, products & services.

All of the visitors who touched your reader with their badge will receive a summary of their visit, including a link to your profile and products on the Futurebuild website. You will also have the opportunity to contact these visitors after the show to follow up on your leads.

Exhibitors at the 2020 show received an average of 109 touches and those with scanners received a further 83 qualified leads on average. These are all leads that exhibitors can then follow up on.
